Presently I am writing another review for this publication on the education of Jewish girls in Czarist Russia. (This is part of my effort to respect La Salle's liberal arts tradition by engaging in cross-disciplinary scholarly activities. My years of teaching physical and cultural geography also contribute to this tradition.)
- Continued work on newfoundations.com, the education website I cofounded with Edward Rozycki. Projections indicate that visits for 2012 should total 3.5 million. Also, it is now indexed by Google Scholar and is regularly downloaded by colleges and universities around the world. (Our website also regularly publishes selected articles by La Salle students, a number of which are highly ranked by search engines such as Google. This visibility contributes to La Salle's academic reputation.)
