Spring 3-25-2015

Art and Community: Do Artists and Museums Have a Social Responsibility?

Miranda Clark-Binder
La Salle University, clarkbinder@lasalle.edu

Mey-Yen Moriuchi PhD
La Salle University, moriuchi@lasalle.edu

Follow this and additional works at: http://digitalcommons.lasalle.edu/explorercafe

Part of the Fine Arts Commons and the History of Art, Architecture, and Archaeology Commons

Recommended Citation
http://digitalcommons.lasalle.edu/explorercafe/35

This Article is brought to you for free and open access by the Explorer Connection at La Salle University Digital Commons. It has been accepted for inclusion in Explorer Café by an authorized administrator of La Salle University Digital Commons. For more information, please contact careyc@lasalle.edu.
Art and Community: Do Artists and Museums Have a Social Responsibility?

Miranda Clark-Binder, La Salle Art Museum
Mey-Yen Moriuchi, Art History
Art as an Instrument for Social Change

“Art which is not propaganda is not art at all.” -Diego Rivera

Diego Rivera, Liberation of the Peon, 1931

Diego Rivera, Enslavement of the Indians, 1930
“A work of art ... does not need revolution as its subject in order to be revolutionary.... Art will not create social change, but it can provoke thought and prepare us for change. Art can tell us what we do not see, and sometimes what we do not want to see....”

-Elizabeth Catlett

“We believe art ignites change.” - Philadelphia Mural Arts Program

Erik Okdeh, Family Interrupted, 2012
“What I dream of is an art of balance, of purity and serenity, devoid of troubling or depressing subject matter, an art which could be for every mental worker, for the businessman as well as the man of letters, for example, a soothing, calming influence on the mind, something like a good armchair which provides relaxation from physical fatigue.”  -Henri Matisse
“Basically I don’t think of anything when I paint. I see colours. I strive with joy to convey them onto my canvas just as I see them. They arrange themselves as they choose, any old way. Sometimes that makes a picture. I’m a brainless animal...” — Paul Cezanne

Paul Cezanne, Ginger Pot, c. 1895

Paul Cezanne, Mont Sainte Victoire, 1902-04
“...after all, the aim of art is to create space - space that is not compromised by decoration or illustration, space within which the subjects of painting can live.”

-Frank Stella
Discussion

1. Do you think artists have a social obligation/responsibility?

2. What value do you place on aesthetics and an artist’s personal vision? Creativity? Originality?

3. Do you think art should be a tool for social change?

4. Can art be impactful if it doesn’t come with a socially or politically charged message? In other words, can art just be art?
Do Museums Have a Social Responsibility?
Are art museums for someone or about something?

• “All museums...are ripe with possibilities for visitors to find personal meaning and to appreciate other cultures. But the perspectives of mainstream cultures still pervade many museums. By cultivating and expressing a variety of cultural perspectives in the presentation and interpretation of their collections, museums can foster inclusiveness.”-American Association of Museums

• “…the most fundamental change that has affected museums during the (past) half century...is the now almost universal conviction that they exist in order to serve the public. The old-style museum felt itself under no such obligation. It existed, it had a building, and it had collections and a staff to look after them... The museum’s prime responsibility was to its collections, not its visitors.” – Kenneth Hudson, UNESCO magazine Museum International

What do you think?
What do art museums want?

• “I like to think that by providing and preserving examples of beauty, museums foster a greater sense of caring in the world and urge their visitors to undergo a radical decentering before the work of art.” -Neil MacGregor, Director, British Museum

• “Buildings don’t make museums; art and only art does. It is art, speaking unequivocally for itself, that creates a museum’s imprimatur in the first place. The debt of museums to art and artists down through time cannot be overestimated, can never be repaid; it is an obligation that can only be respected, abided by and learned from.” -Roberta Smith, Art Critic, New York Times

What do you think?
In conclusion...

• What makes good art?

• What makes a good museum?