Education Conference: What the Best Teachers Do

November 5th, 2005

La Salle University

What makes a great teacher great? Who are the teachers, students remember long after graduation? The short answer is--it's not what teachers do, it's what they understand. Lesson plans and lecture notes matter less than the special way teachers comprehend the subject, and value human learning. The best teachers know their subjects inside and out--but they also know how to engage and challenge students in order to provoke impassioned responses. Most of all, they believe two things fervently: teaching matters and students can learn.

Sign up for a day of exploration and entertainment as we look at what the best teachers do. This exclusive one-day workshop will take place on November 5th, 2005 on the La Salle University campus.

- 8:00-9:00 Check-in with continental breakfast
- 9:00-11:00 Key-note speaker
- 11:00-12:00 Box lunches and book signing
- 12:00-1:30 Break out sessions

Keynote Speaker:

Kenneth R. Bain (Ph.D., University of Texas at Austin, 1976) is founding Director of the Center for Teaching Excellence at New York University. His scholarship includes an interest in teaching and learning issues. Internationally recognized for his insights into teaching and learning, and for a fifteen-year study of what the best educators do, he has presented invited workshops at more than one hundred universities in recent years--in the United States, Canada, Europe, Asia, Africa, and Australia. His learning research has concentrated on a wide range of issues, including deep and sustained learning and the creation of natural critical learning environments. His recently-published book What the Best College Teachers Do. (Harvard University Press, 2004) won the 2004 Virginia and Warren Stone Prize for an outstanding book on education and society.
