

How did you first become acquainted with Dr. O'Grady?

Did you have classes with him while studying to get your Bachelors degree at La Salle?

What type of student was he? Active? Dedicated? Practical Joker?

When did you return as a professor to La Salle? Was Dr. O'Grady here at that time or did he come later?

About how long were you colleagues?

Are there any other current history faculty members that were in the department before his retirement? Who?

I understand that he specifically studied and dealt with Irish and Immigrant history. Is that correct? Do you remember what kind of classes he taught?

What kind of professor was he? Was he tough? Was he well received/liked among the students?

What kind of projects and activities did Dr. O'Grady participate in while a professor at La Salle? (lectures, forums, seminars, involvement as head of clubs/organizations)

What kinds of projects, if any, did you collaborate on with Dr. O'Grady?

I have found that Dr. O'Grady was head of the history department for a time. Were you here during that time?

What kind of policies or other contributions did he bring to the department during that time?

What were his reasons for leaving that position?

What are your favorite memories of Dr. O'Grady?

What events or topics do you feel should be discussed during the interview?