The “Signum Fidei” medal for achievement in the advancement of Christian principles will be awarded this year to Martin H. Work, Executive Director of the National Council of Catholic Men at the Alumni Communion Dinner on November 1.

Mr. Work, a native Californian, received his A.B. from Loyola University in Los Angeles, his M.S. from the University of Southern California, and his LL.D. from Spring Hill College, Alabama.

He has taught at his alma mater, Loyola University and has worked for several broadcasting networks as a writer and producer. During World War II he served as a Special Consultant to the Secretary of the Army. Since the war he has worked on Madison Avenue for Young & Rubicam and acted as Consultant to the Office of Military Government in Germany and to the National Security Resources Board.

In 1950, Mr. Work was asked by the Bishops of the United States to take on the task of building the National Council of Catholic Men into a coordinated, unified, effective Catholic Action federation of all Catholic men’s organizations in the United States. Today, NCCM is a federation of 10,000 men’s organizations in the United States and is carrying out an aggressive lay apostolate program of which the Church can be justly proud.

Mr. Work’s service to the Church has been marked by his conviction that the layman has an inescapable responsibility to contribute to the mission of the Church. Through the years, this conviction has shown itself in many ways.

In 1954, His Holiness, Pope Pius XII conferred on him the title, Knight of St. Gregory.

In 1960, he was named by Pope John XXIII to the eight man Board of Directors of the Permanent Committee of the World Congress of the Lay Apostolate—one of the most important coordinating lay groups in the Church.

Mr. Work will receive the Signum Fidei medal at the dinner which is to be held in the College Union Ball Room at 7:30 P.M. on the feast of All Saints. The Mass will be offered in the College Auditorium at 6:30.

In recent years the medal has been presented at the Annual Communion Breakfast. This year, the Alumni Board of Directors decided to change the morning Mass and Breakfast to an evening Mass and Dinner and present the Signum Fidei medal at that time.

The “Signum Fidei” medal derives its name from the motto of the Brothers of the Christian Schools—“Sign of Faith”—and was established in 1941 by the Alumni Association to recognize personal achievements in harmony with the established aims of La Salle College and the Brothers. It is awarded annually to a person who has made “noteworthy contributions to the advancement of Christian principles.”

It has been awarded to persons such as the late Denis Cardinal Dougherty, Bishop Fulton J. Sheen, Father James Keller, Dr. Francis J. Braceland, Henry Viscardi and Dr. Joseph Toland.

Communion Dinner: November 1st
Three La Salle men responded to President Kennedy's appeal for Peace Corps volunteers to go to the aid of peoples in underdeveloped areas of the world. Early this month Francis T. Froschle, '61, and Donald D. Zelinski, '58, finished a seven week training program at Pennsylvania State University and departed for teaching assignments in the Philippine Islands.

In mid-September, Angelo T. Randazzo, '58, was one of 26 Peace Corps volunteers to report to Michigan State University for two months language, physical and first aid training prior to departure for the University of Nigeria in Nsukka, Nigeria, to teach and do research.

Zelinski, 25, a high school teacher until being selected for the Peace Corps, was graduated from La Salle in 1958 and received a fellowship at Niagara University, where he earned a master's degree in 1959. A high school football and baseball standout, and a baseball letterwinner in college, Zelinski taught history and biology at St. James High School, Chester, and for one year coached the track and cross country teams.

"I joined the Peace Corps," Zelinski said, "because I believe that the image of America has been distorted in the eyes of foreigners. Perhaps, in some small way, the Peace Corps can help to right the distorted view held by some peoples.

"I was in the enviable position of being able to apply for the Peace Corps," he added. "Not many people could simply pull-up stakes and leave family, job, social ties, etc. Many of us, in the Corps, are of the opinion that we will represent the many people in the U.S. who would like to join, but can not possibly do so because of personal responsibilities."

Froschle, a member of La Salle's 1961 graduating class, like Zelinski is a graduate of St. James High. He worked his way through La Salle, working as a bricklayer, pharmacy clerk, and painter. He earned a bachelor's degree in economics. and in college was president of the Economics Club and active in intra-mural baseball, football, and basketball.

Froschle speaks of the "missionary spirit" of the Corps, and adds, that "The Peace Corps will give us a chance to give direct help to those who need it, and also give young people an opportunity to get to know themselves better.

"My main motivation in joining the Peace Corps," he concludes, "is the opportunity to give this direct aid in a very personal way, to those who need it most."

Randazzo, who graduated magna cum laude from La Salle College in 1958, received his M.A. in Political Science from Rutgers University in 1960. While an undergraduate at La Salle, Randazzo was active in Student Government and received the James Finnegan award at graduation "for the Senior who exemplified in an eminent manner Christian ideals of social justice in student government and campus political affairs." For the past two years, he has been teaching at Cardinal Dougherty High School.

Nigeria, his destination, which has almost no native-born teachers, was an early applicant for Peace Corps assistance. The school year there begins in December so that the Peace Corpsmen will complete their two-month orientation in time to be on hand for its start.

Randazzo believes, with President Kennedy, that the U.S. cannot win people with technical and military aid alone; that we are engaged in a battle for men's minds; that it is time to rejuvenate old ideals of doing great things. Since the passing of the American frontier, it is necessary to find our challenge elsewhere. Further, Peace Corpsmen represent a saving to America over the highly paid technical experts, who have not always come into contact with the common people of a country to which they were assigned and thereby failed to communicate American ideas, concern or the workability of the American way. The aid idea, then, is not new, the sacrifice asked is. Peace Corpsmen are required to live at the same level as the people they are helping. It is hoped they will help not only with technical know-how but in demonstrating the feasibility of local democratic initiative.

Randazzo hastens to point out that his motives are not purely selfless, that he will gain a great deal from the experience. It is a challenge, and any challenge successfully met aids in the development of the individual and becomes a vital part of his own education.

George K. Dunye, '60, who came to La Salle College in 1956 from his native Liberia, returned there September 29, as a representative of the Chase Manhattan Bank.

A finance major at La Salle, he has since completed requirements for his M.B.A. in international banking at New York University and will receive his degree in February, 1962. He returns to Monrovia with his wife, the former Edith Irene Hamilton, and his son, George Simaywuh, born in January, 1960. There he will be Assistant to the Manager of the Chase bank.

A letterman on La Salle's varsity soccer team, Dunye was active in the All-African Student Union of Greater Philadelphia, serving as president in 1959-60, and was the founder and first president of the Liberian Students Association of Philadelphia.

Dunye received a Point Four scholarship in basic census techniques at the University of Liberia in 1952, then came to the U.S. in 1953 for six months advanced training. Returning to Liberia, he served the government of President William V. S. Tubman until coming to La Salle in 1956 on an African-American Institute scholarship and a Republic of Liberia grant-in-aid.

Faculty Members Given Award

The gentlemen gracing our cover are well known to all La Salle men as two of the most devoted teachers in our institution. Indeed, it is no exaggeration to say that they are institutions in themselves. Dr. Roland Holroyd, professor of Biology, and Dr. Joseph Flubacher, professor of Economics, were recently recognized for their outstanding contributions to their field when they were given Lindback Foundation awards for "distinguished teaching" at La Salle.

Established in honor of Christian R. and Mary F. Lindback, the purpose of the awards is to encourage excellence in the teaching profession. The selection of La Salle's recipients was conducted by a Committee of Deans on recommendation of faculty and students. Each received $1000.00.

Dr. Holroyd, a member of the La Salle staff for 41 years, was graduated from the University of Pennsylvania in 1918. He earned his master's and Ph.D. degrees from Penn in 1920 and 1923.

While teaching Biology and pursuing his graduate studies at Penn, Dr. Holroyd came to La Salle as a part-time instructor in Biology. Then in 1930, when the college moved to its present site, he was asked to become a full-time member of the La Salle faculty.

One of the best remembered figures and literally a tradition among pre-medical students on the Christian Brothers' college campus, Dr. Holroyd has taught scores of area physicians, surgeons, and dentists, who recall "the Good Doctor"—as he is affectionately known by his students—for his wry wit and the academic robes in which he enters the classroom even today. "If you're a priest, you should look like a priest, and if you're a professor, you should look like a professor," he remarks.

Perhaps best remembered is Dr. Holroyd's disdain for "modern" teaching methods and extra-curricular frills, often commenting that "you mustn't judge the picture by the frame" and cautioning his students "not to mistake the sideshow (extra-curricular activities) for the Main event (studies)."

Last fall, after a heart attack, he relinquished the chairmanship of the Biology department but continues to teach a full schedule of classes.

Dr. Flubacher, one of the most distinguished graduates of La Salle's distinguished class of '35, received his master's and doctor of education degrees from Temple University. He is the author of The Concept of Ethics in the History of Economics and like Dr. Holroyd is a bachelor. He has been a full professor and chairman of the Economics department since 1948.
O’HARA ELECTED PRESIDENT

Francis R. O’Hara, ’54, was elected President of the La Salle College Alumni Association in the annual balloting, and officially took office at the annual dinner-meeting of the Alumni Board of Directors, held September 7 at the Commodore Barry Club. Frank succeeds Frank Blatcher, ’56, as the Alumni’s first officer.

James Gillespie, ’55, the new Vice-President, succeeded Joseph Malone, ’56. John Finley, ’24, was re-elected to the treasurer’s post. Also introduced was the new Alumni Director, James J. McDonald, ’58.

O’Hara, captain of the N.C.A.A. championship basketball team of 1954, was graduated magna cum laude from La Salle in that year, received his law degree from Villanova University Law School in 1957 and is now an attorney for the Gulf Oil Company. He was editor-in-chief of the Law School’s 1956-57 Law Review, and in 1959-60 was President of the school’s alumni association. He and his wife, Jean, have two sons and a recently arrived daughter.

Gillespie is a C.P.A. for Jenkins, Feterole, and Company. He and his wife, Cathy, have a boy and a girl.

John Finley, who has held many positions of responsibility with the Alumni Association including the Presidency, is convalescing from a serious illness at St. Francis Home in Darby, Pa.

McDonald worked two years for the Defense Department and taught last year at Bishop McDevitt High School in Wynneway.

RECORD ENROLLMENT

La Salle College welcomed a record overall day and evening enrollment of some 4800 students on Sept. 18, when the day division opened the college’s 99th academic year. Evening classes began Sept. 5.

Another mark of some 860 day freshmen, added to pre-registration totals of upper-classmen, brings the day enrollment to another record of over 2600 students. The evening division student body at over 2200 exceeds another record.

Another record total—for the fourth consecutive year—of more than 1600 R.O.T.C. cadets, are taking part in La Salle’s military science program, commanded by Col. William J. Bennett, USA.

Major innovations of the La Salle campus for the 1961-62 academic year are construction of a $500,000 residence hall expected for completion next spring, two new courses, and 18 new faculty members.

A twin-unit dormitory, which will accommodate 150 additional out-of-town students, the college’s fifth residence hall was designed by Carroll, Grisdale and Van Alen.

Both new courses, “The U.S. in the Twentieth Century” and “Constitutional Law,” are being offered by the Government department.

FACULTY MEMBERS

New faculty members this year are: Joseph A. Kane, instructor, Economics; Michael A. Omeara, instructor, Finance; Joseph F. Spieker and Leonid D. Rudynski, both instructors, German; Dr. Arthur L. Hennessey, assistant professor, and Brother Paul Day, F.S.C., Ph.D., assistant professor, both History; Vincent J. Serphilippo, instructor, Italian; Brother G. Brendan, F.S.C., and James J. Campbell, both instructors, Mathematics.

Other new faculty members are Dr. John J. Beach and Dr. Raymond J. Pierzchalski, both assistant professors, and Thomas R. Phillips, instructor, all Philosophy; Brother David Hillary, F.S.C., Ph.D., assistant professor, Classics; Rev. Henry Paul, OSFS, Rev. Fererr Halligan, O.P., and Brother Eric Leo, F.S.C., all instructors, Theology, and new R.O.T.C. staff members Capt. William J. Fox and Capt. David W. Rumsey, both assistant professors, Military Science.

NEW EVENING DEAN

Brother Francis Emery, F.S.C., has been appointed dean of La Salle College’s evening division, it was announced by Brother Daniel Bernian, F.S.C., president of the college. He succeeds Brother Gregory Paul, F.S.C., evening school dean since 1953 and former president of the college.

La Salle’s evening division, opened in 1916, has soared from an enrollment of 127 students at its inception to this year’s record total of some 2200 students.

Brother Emery, 53, joined the La Salle staff in 1960 as an associate professor of English, and this year served as director of the college’s summer sessions program.

The new dean is a 1941 graduate of West Philadelphia Catholic High School for Boys, and an alumnus of Catholic University, where he received his bachelor’s degree in 1949. He earned the master’s and Ph.D. degrees in English from the University of Pittsburgh in 1954 and 1957, respectively. He is a member of Phi Beta Kappa.

Brother Paul, 53, president of the college from 1945-52—during the post-war period of rapid expansion, returns to the teaching staff as professor of Chemistry. He has also served as dean of the college.
WHY WE MUST CONQUER SPACE

Dr. Wernher von Braun, noted American rocket expert, addressed the students and faculty of La Salle College on October 10 in the College Union Lounge.

Dr. von Braun discussed, "Why We Must Conquer Space," in a talk sponsored jointly by La Salle's student council and college union committees.

Dr. von Braun is director of the George C. Marshall Space Flight Center, National Aeronautics and Space Administration, at Huntsville, Ala.

Dr. von Braun, 49, was born in Wirsitz, Germany, received his bachelor's degree from the University of Berlin at the age of 20, and two years later earned his doctorate in physics at the same school. In the 1930's he joined a group of inventors who constituted the German Rocket Society for Space Travel and in the 1944-45, and taught chemistry and physics at La Salle High School (1932-33) as well as at the college.

FACULTY LEAVE PROGRAM

The first two recipients of grants in the recently inaugurated faculty leave program will be pursuing research in the coming year. Joseph Mooney of the Economics department will study capital formation in the economically under-developed country of El Salvador; the work will be utilized as a doctoral dissertation at Penn. As part of his Ph.D. work at Georgetown, Joseph Mihalich of the philosophy department will pursue a study of the relationship of certain epistemologies to the ontological structure of reality. Another proposal before the Committee on Faculty Leaves was also submitted to the American Council of Learned Societies which awarded Dr. Ivan Adamsky a grant to complete a history of the Subcarpathian Ruthenia.

FULBRIGHT GRANT

John K. de Francesco, Jr., '55, instructor in Italian, has been chosen by the Department's board of foreign scholarships for a 1961-62 Fulbright Educational Exchange Grant.

Mr. de Francesco will study and observe uses in Italian literature and language in Italy at an as yet unnamed university.

BRAUN TEAM, were used to launch America's first satellites on the earth and sun—Explorer I and Pioneer IV—and in the first successful space flight and recovery of animal life.

BROTHER CLEMENTIAN DIES

Brother E. Clementian, F.S.C., died in St. Joseph's Hospital, Friday, August 25. He was 64.

A native of Elizabeth, N.J., Brother Clementian was a member of the Brothers of the Christian schools for 46 years. He was an associate professor of English and taught theology at the college since 1947, and taught countless thousands of others in Philadelphia's parochial elementary and diocesan high schools.

Brother Clementian taught in parochial elementary schools in the parishes of Most Precious Blood, Visitation, Catholic, and St. Patrick's, from 1917 to 1925, when he began teaching at West Philadelphia Catholic High School for Boys. He was appointed director of novices at the Brothers' district headquarters, Ammendale, Md., in 1937 and later taught at LaSalle High School (1942-45) and St. John's High School, Orange, N.J., (1945-47) before joining the college staff.

He received both his bachelor's and master's degrees from La Salle College.

Surviving are two sisters, Mrs. Margaret Brennan and Mrs. Mary Merritt, and a brother, Francis Brennan, all Elizabeth residents.

Solemn High Mass was held Tuesday, August 29, in the Church of the Holy Child, Broad Street and Duncannon Avenue. Burial was at the Brothers' cemetery in Ammendale.
The present national concern with the quality of our educational enterprise is something we have often wished for. Since people are asking questions they ignored before, they are now willing to listen to answers that bored them in the past. All of this gives us an admirable opportunity to make clearer just what we want to do, what we should do, and what we can do.

In reviewing the reports of the administrative officers of La Salle for the year 1960-61, I was impressed by the sincere effort to perfect our offerings in the four areas, of instruction, of student services, of physical properties, and of public relations. My general report to the Alumni this year will recognize the progress in the area of instruction under the administration of Brother Fidelian of Mary, Vice President for Academic Affairs; Brother G. Robert, Dean, Arts and Sciences; Brother David Cassian, Dean, Business Administration; Brother Gregorian Paul and now Brother Francis Emery, Dean, Evening Division; Brother G. Joseph, Registrar; Brother F. Christopher, Director of Admissions; Brother E. Joseph, Librarian; the chairmen and members of our departments and committees.

Growth: The past year was one of significant progress for La Salle College. This progress, moreover, was in a number of different areas within the academic division. The nature of these advances and their diversity has shown that the College can call upon impressive resources of work, imagination, and sacrifice in coping with the academic problems that still confront it.

The year saw a continuation of the College's rapid rate of growth. In the day school, freshman enrollment was up some 30% over the preceding year. In the Evening Division the total increase was some 5%. More impressive increases occurred during the Summer Session of 1961 which was up some 85%. La Salle served a total student body of more than 5,000.

Administration and Instruction: After analysing the individual departmental reports of the day division concerning personnel, departmental meetings, long-range plans, honors and grants to graduates and chairmen's recommendations, it can be said first that there is an impressive amount of educational activity in the College.

Because of the work of the Curriculum Committee last year, most departments turned their attention to revaluations of programs, discussions of courses for special groups and evaluation of outcomes. Several departments are experimenting with lecture and discussion groups arrangements, notably Philosophy, History, and English.

Two big changes occurred in the Evening Division in the past year—a change of director and a change of administrative location. After eight years of administering the Evening Division at peak thoroughness, efficiency and attention to detail, Brother Gregorian Paul is returning to the day division as Professor of Chemistry. He is being replaced by the energetic Director of the Summer Session, Brother Francis Emery. The second change was of the Evening Division Office to a more spacious area on the first floor of College Hall.

The Summer School showed remarkable progress during the past year. Over a hundred students from other institutions were enrolled, primarily in basic science courses. La Salle students in greater numbers appeared to be taking courses not only to make up deficiencies or to lighten loads for future semesters, but also to enrich their programs.

The Registrar's Office was strengthened in the past year by the addition to its staff of Brother Daniel Philip, an instructor in the Department of Finance. While the general efficiency of this Office appears to have maintained levels established in the previous years, there is continuing need, perhaps by the addition of equipment and a re-vamping of procedure, to speed the operation at two to three critical times during the year.

"In the Admissions Office the volume of applications grows apace. As with other colleges throughout the country, La Salle is experiencing a gradual rise in standards of admissions. Competition for the better high school graduates increases every year. La Salle's Alumni can be of considerable help to the college by interesting high ability students in its programs.

The library continues to be a very efficient and well-organized operation. The past year saw an increase typical of the past few years. Use of the library is growing proportionately about to the general growth of the College; the basement long used for dances and films has been converted to a reading and stacks area.

There was a marked increase in overall enrollment in the Reserve Officers Training Corps. At the annual review the Board of Inspectors found no unsatisfactory factory conditions. The rating received was superior.

Planning and Development: Turning to the "growing edge" of the academic area, there are heartening signs for the future. For the past several years, the need has often been discussed of a thorough self-study and a specific development program. There is some hope that the sketch of such a study and program will be completed within the next semester.

Perhaps the most important element of any self-study is a precise definition of objectives. As a step toward this definit tion, the Committee on Academic Development concerned itself in the past year with a study of the overall objectives of the College and the role of academic objectives in this complex. The detailed report of the Committee has recently been circulated among the faculty and will soon be presented to College Council for official adoption.

During the past year, a Curriculum Committee was appointed by the President to examine the curriculum in the light of changing conditions and needed improvements. Its first report indicates that the Committee is concerning itself for the first two years with immediate problems in the core curriculum. In the process it hopes to clarify for itself other longer-range considerations which can lead to a more fundamental revision. After discussion within departments and at a general faculty meeting, it is hoped that all or most of the suggestions will be adopted for the next edition of the two-year catalogue. The principal suggestions are for a tightening of the theology and philosophy programs, a reduction of the social science requirement, a strengthening of science and math courses, and a fine arts requirement.

Several special programs were initiated in the past year which are providing new opportunities for students. The first of these was the establishment of a Junior Year group at the University of Fribourg, Switzerland. While there was some difficulties of adaptation with the first group there, there was universal agreement about the value of European study.

Several departments are now providing programs for gifted students among their majors, e.g., the newly revised French Honors program and the research course for the Biology department. The regular lecture series also proves a certain amount of curricular enrichment for all interested students. Some of the visiting lecturers last year were: Douglas Hyde, Katherine Anne Porter, Dr. Richard Patee (Laval), Colin Jackson (BBC commentator), Fr. Raymond Schoder (art historian), Donald MacDonald (columnist), Fr. Illud Evans (editor of Blackfriars), and Dr. George Taylor (Penn). Both the chemistry and psychology departments had visits of several days by important scholars. Other campus groups presented speakers including Mayor Dilworth, Dr. Marston Morse (Institute for Advanced Study), TV commentator David Brinkley, poet Adrienne Rich and novelist John Knowles.

No doubt the major gains in the academic area during the past year were in faculty development. The first of these gains was a new salary scale which, in range and schedule of increments followed the general lines of a faculty committee report made last year.

The second boon to faculty morale was the awards for excellent teaching, donated this year by the Lindbach Foundation. They were in the sum of $1,000.00 each to Dr. Roland Holroyd (Biology) and Dr. Joseph Flubacher (Economics). The third significant contribution was the grants made by the La Salle Endowment Foundation for short term departmental research and professional projects.

The fourth, and in many ways the most important, step in the past year was the initiation of a program for faculty research leaves. Two doctoral candidates will complete dissertations in the first year of the program: Mr. Joseph Mihalich (Philosophy) and Dr. Joseph Mooney (Economics). Two other faculty men are on leave with grants from outside agencies: Dr. Ivan Rudnytsky, with a grant from the American Council of Learned Societies for research in Russian History and Mr. John De Francesco, with a Fulbright grant for study of language courses in Italy.

While the basic service of the College to the social, political and church community is to produce educated Christians, the past year has seen an extension of other services which the College appropriately provides. Professors continue to be called upon by industry and educational groups for consultation and services. A closer relationship is developing with area high schools through the continuation of a series of meetings with high school counselor and principals, the offerings of a course in advanced math for high school students and a debate tournament. The significant development in this area, however, was the eight-week summer institute in bio-chemistry for outstanding high school students. The project was supported by a grant from the National Science Foundation and it was an extraordinary success for the students.

The College likewise opened to the community a variety of activities of a cultural nature—concerts, plays, art exhibits, and so forth. Two chamber music concerts, for example, were offered by members of the Philadelphia Orchestra.

Even such a brief and rapid survey makes it clear, I think, that the College has been moving dynamically on many academic fronts. There are many problems still facing us. We intend to face these remaining problems with a will. Backed by the growing support of a loyal Alumni, we feel great confidence for the future.

Brother Daniel Bernian, F.S.C.
President
With the first basketball game still over a month away, the eyes of the campus athletic buffs are centered on the fortunes of the soccer and cross country teams. Both Frank Wetzler, coach of the cinderella, and Joe Smith, the booters' mentor, are approaching the season with a "wait-and-see" attitude. Neither can be pinpointed to any definite prediction.

SOCCER

The so-called campus experts are divided on their opinions of the team itself. Many feel that this will be the year that this growing sport will evolve to an above .500 finish. Others state that the loss of All-American star Tommy Scanlon will be too much of a deficit for the booters to overcome.

Possibly the biggest ingredient for success of any athletic squad is missing on the soccer team—a team leader. Scanlon took charge last season and helped the Smithmen equal the previous best for a La Salle team, five won, five lost, one tied.

Despite this noticeable lack of leadership, the soccer team will retain ample talent to surpass last year's log. Bill McShain is a better-than-good goalie who has improved every year. This could be the season he blossoms into a top flight All-American candidate. Bobby Watson has tremendous potential as a defender.

Roman Zylawy, somewhat of a disappointment in the scoring column last year, has the ability to top even Scanlon's heroes. Before he had played a game, coach Smith called him a potential All-American. This is the year that will make or bust the former Central star wing.

Other members of last year's squad that should show signs of improvement this year include George Bohmberger, Jack Finnerty, Tony Baratta, Gordie Gray, Jack Hannon, Frank Mlynarezyk, Frank and Pete O'Neill, John Pedata, Phil Rogers, Joe Schmidt and Jerry Slomianna.

Graduates who played last year are Scanlon, Aldo DelPino, Cliff Gillespie and Jim Pastore. Another loss, which no one figured on, was the transfer of one of the leading goal-getters, Frank Prokop, to the U. S. Military Academy.

If everyone improves as expected and the crop of promising sophomores come through, this could be THE year. If everything goes wrong, it will be a long season behind the Science Building.

CROSS COUNTRY

Coach Frank Wetzler pits the hopes of the cross country team on the shoulders of the 1960 Freshman team in general and Billy Holmes in particular. Holmes should combine with senior Pat Walsh for the best one-two punch in LSC cinder history.

Holmes starred for West Philadelphia High School, then came to La Salle where he won every Freshman dual meet last year and finished fifth among freshmen in the IC4A event in New York.

While most of the attention was centered on Holmes, the rest of last year's frosh didn't exactly embarrass themselves with their showing. They usually finished somewhere behind Billy, but somewhere ahead of the opposition's leader.

Other members of the frosh cross country squad are Bob Kephart, Larry Patterson, Bob Harkins, Jim Flannery, Tom McDonnell, and Paul Minehan.

However, these sophs have a tough assignment in attempting to displace graduates John Caras, Charley Del Rossi, and Dick Flint.

The rest of the squad is back though, paced by Walsh, generally recognized as the best varsity runner of a year ago. Back to help Pat this year are John Gain, John Holbrook, Ed Morgan, John McMenemy, Bill Mullin, Frank Remus, John Walsh, Bob Ward, and Henry Washington.

BASKETBALL

Just as English anthologies run from Beowulf to T. S. Eliot in their scope of British literature, the scope of La Salle basketball could be observed in an anthology entitled From Faust to Gola.

New, six long seasons after Long Tom's exodus to the pros, they may have to change the title.

The precocious six foot, six inch package which could bring about the new book has hoopball coach Dudley Moore in raptures. The perennial pessimist calls him "the equal to (Dick) Ricketts and (Sid hugo) Green at similar stages of development."

This bastion of hope came to the Explorers from Monsignor Bonner High School, in Drexel Hill, where he showed enough to be fondled by over seventy colleges. Last year, he averaged over 26 points a game for the freshman team. Over the past summer, he caused roundball fans to shake their heads in disbelief when he completely bottled Chester High's Emerson Baynard, Baynard, incidentally, was merely considered the best high school basketball player in the nation last season.

He answers to Frank Corace, and if you hadn't heard of him till now, you will in the near future, when the pre-season journalistic jargon begins to flow across the nation.

Corace had every attribute for stardom when he was graduated from high school. Since then he has added finesse and weight, two attributes necessary for superstardom.

He joins a team that won fifteen, lost seven, and graduated a part-time starter. His new teammates will include Billy Raftery, the always improving junior; Bobby McAteer; Tony Abbott; Gene Park; George Fredrich, and Dennis Murphy.

Raftery couldn't quite live up to his pre-season ballyhoo last season for a number of reasons, the most notable of which were a series of injuries, a team which lacked height, and a tendency to get into personal foul trouble. This year, the spotlight will not be centered on him, but the team in general. This should help the outwardly carefree, but inwardly tense history major, who has been compared to great Gola on more than one occasion.
McAteer, the captain of the 1960-61 Explorers, also received a big press splash—as a freshman at the Naval Academy. He suffered through his sophomore year at La Salle playing behind the more experienced Ralph Bantivoglio and Joey Heyer. Last Year, he began strong, suffered a strange mid-season slump, and came back at the end. This year he could be the fulcrum on which the Blue and Gold pendulum swings.

Abbott is sort of an amateur Horatio Alger. The five foot, ten inch junior began practice last year completely unsung—with the exception of coach Moore's chirping, "All he needs is confidence in his own ability," announced Dudy before the Millersville game. By the Villanova 'ray, Abbott had acquired this confidence, mainly through Moore's refusal to bench him in tense moments. Anyone who saw the Villanova game can remember the Mutt-Jeff routine depicted by Hubie White and Abbott. If there were such a thing as a Salvatore Dali of basketball, he would have painted a picture of White leaping in the air to shoot, and Abbott running through his legs with the ball in his grasp.

They call Fredrich lazy. They say he can't shoot. They tell us he lacks spirit. But when last season ended, George had led the Explorers in field goal percentage, was number two in rebounds, and had single-handedly kicked the whey out of Penn's Big Five hopes. George came fast and can be counted on to continue his improvement throughout his senior year.

Park came from nowhere to spoil Villanova by grabbing seventeen rebounds, scoring eight points, and getting a standing ovation from the throng which witnessed his unbelievable performance against the 'Cats. Not endowed with the qualifications for greatness, Park is a "tooth-and-nails" player who scarp for everything.

Murphy gave indications of being valuable against Duquesne, the 1961's final encounter when he scored eleven points in ten minutes and rallied the Explorers to within one point of the team which had conquered the St. Bonaventure club in its game before. He is as good a player as he wants to be, and coach Moore is hoping that he desires a starting berth this time around.

Other than Corace, last year's frosh squad will surrender Jim Flavin and Paul Gallagher to the varsity. Flavin looks to be in good shape to knock a few heads together in his sophomore year and Gallagher is a speedy backcourter with a picture shot.

Much attention will be directed toward Walter Lee Sampson, the biggest thing at La Salle since the college moved from Stiles Street. Walt is a Texas boy who sat out a year because the N.C.A.A. transfer rule. At Pan American College he played varsity ball as a freshman, scoring 22 ppg and grabbing 24 rebounds per contest. If he can come near that total this year, about one-half of the Explorers 1961-62 problems will be solved.

Last, but not least, is Curt Fromal, a small man with a prolific scoring touch. Curt was right behind Raftrey in frosh scoring two years ago, then dropped out of school for a season. If he can propel enough of his jump shots into the hoop this season, they may have to make room for him on the starting five.

The Explorers will compete in their first mid-season tourney in four years when they meet Dartmouth in the opening round of the Holiday Festival Tournament in New York's Madison Square Garden on December 26.

GLEE CLUB RECORDS

The College Glee Club, 75 voices strong under the direction of Father William J. Sailer, has cut its first LP record. "WE MEET AGAIN . . ." includes, besides the title song, twenty other selections like "The Happy Wanderer," "Thank Heaven for Little Girls," "Autumn Leaves," "Climb Every Mountain," "Stardust" and a medley of Romberg selections. Recorded at their annual Spring Concert in 1961, the album may be ordered at the College Union Office. The Price is $3.75.

CLASS OF 1965
What good is my gift?" you ask. Does your contribution provide the additional faculty we will need in the coming years? Can your gift build the additional facilities required? And equip them with the latest educational aids? Yes! Your contribution may seem like a drop in the bucket. But combined with the contributions of others it will help La Salle meet the ever growing demand for higher education. Drop. Drop. Drop. Splash! Give the gift of knowledge. Make your pledge to the Centenary Fund... so that La Salle can give to the future of America.

If you have not received information on the Centenary Program, send for information today. La Salle College Development Office Philadelphia 41, Pa. Victor 8-8300
... Ready for occupancy in the Spring of 1962, La Salle’s Fifth Student Residence Hall will be a double-unit three-story building which will accommodate 151 students.
